Written permission
Due to limited resources and high demand, we're unable to sign any letter or contract specifying that your project or use has our explicit permission. As long as you follow the guidance on this page, and attribute the content correctly, feel free to move forward with your project.
Attribution
All uses of the content must provide attribution to both Google and our data providers. We require clear, visible attribution when the content is shown. You may not move the attribution to the end credits or fade it out after a few seconds.
Note that if you (a) embed a classic map, Street View panorama, or My Map; (b) use one of our APIs on the web or in an application; or (c) use Google Earth Pro, or Earth Studio on desktop; then the necessary attribution is already baked into the map and no further credit is needed. Learn more about how to properly credit, as well as how to identify providers, on our attribution guidelines page.
If you're unwilling to meet our attribution requirements, contact our data provider(s) directly to inquire about purchasing the rights to use the content directly. You'll find provider contact information listed on their websites.

Do I need to use the text provided on the imagery?
The automatically generated Google logo and data provider attribution may only be removed or obstructed if reintroduced in a visible form elsewhere within the content (for example, in a photo caption below a Google Earth still). In other words, your text must be as visible as it would have been if you had used the default text that we provide.
What does the attribution text need to say?
If you're not using the text provided directly on Google Maps and Google Earth imagery, the text of your attribution must say the name "Google" and the relevant data provider(s), such as "Map data: Google, DigitalGlobe".
You may customize the style and placement of the attribution text, as long as the text is legible to the average viewer or reader. Note that Google logos cannot be used in-line (for example, "These maps from [Google logo].")
I'd like to use your imagery in my film or television program. Any special rules?
Attribution to both Google and our data suppliers must appear on-screen for the entire duration the content is displayed. We will not approve requests to move the attribution to end credits or to fade out after a few seconds.
Please note that in order to use Google Maps and Google Earth imagery in film or on television, you must apply for our free broadcast license. You may customize the style and
